North Dakota Lawmakers Urge FAA To Support Their Airports

Congressional officials from North Dakota recently sent a letter to FAA Administrator Michael Huerta asking the agency to offer support on infrastructure projects at airports in their state.

In the letter, Senators John Hoeven (R-ND) and Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND) and Representative Kevin Cramer (R-ND-At Large) asked the agency to recognize that North Dakota is continuing to experience unprecedented economic growth statewide and that expansions are necessary to meet existing and future demands for air service. "As North Dakota, the number two oil-producing state in the nation, helps to provide fuel and electricity for our nation, impacts on the aviation infrastructure of this region must be addressed," the letter states. "Investment in our state's aviation system by the FAA through Airport Improvement Program discretionary awards is critical for long-term growth and development."
